Undivided Allies in Career Services: Intercultural Inclusion and Equity

There is an urgent need for intercultural development in career services. University enrollments grow more diverse each year, raising pressure on educators to increase their cultural competence. Publicly, most career centers offer tailored resources for various student populations, but privately many feel unprepared to serve underrepresented students or prepare them for the multicultural job market. And, what about our employers? Are they equipped to support these minority identity communities? Our campuses offer many resources for staff development, but seldom are they tailored toward career services and student preparation for the next steps after college.

CSI West Faculty will focus on better understanding and supporting the career development needs of marginalized communities, including but not limited to:

Communities with Disabilities Communities of Color First Generation Communities
LGBTQ Communities Undocumented Communities
